

24th March 1974

Dear Terry,

I wrote these notes on your 'Genesis Of Terror' story and Barry pencilled the comments on the front. I can think of no better way of letting you know the office feeling than to pass on the unvarnished memos.

As you will see, we love the story but want it brought down to something the budget will stand. If none of this cuts you too deeply, perhaps you'll ring me and we can discuss possible delivery dates - I need to put a date on the commissioning docket.

Yours sincerely,

(Robert Holmes)

DOCTOR WHO

T. Nation Esq.,

Episode 1:

The Tardis is in Limbo - it materialises in a garden where a Time Lord waiting for Dr Who. He directs him to go to Skaro at a time before the Daleks have evolved to try and stop their creation. The Time Lord gives Dr Who a bracelet to transport him with Harry and Sarah to Skaro. They arrive in the middle of a war between the Kaleds and the Thals. Dr Who, Sarah and Harry see some action in a crater and move on towards the City Dome they can see in the distance. They discover that the weapons in use a mixture of old and new and that the troops are very young. In a trench they endure a gas attack and Dr Who and Harry are captured by the Kaleds and taken to a Command Post. From there they are taken to Command HQ to be questioned by Ravon and later Gen. Greiner who tells them that the Kaleds are winning the war against the Thals and will soon wipe them out completely. Skaro is inhabited by Kaleds, Thals and Mutos (people suffering from radiation effects of old atomic wars). Meanwhile in the trench Sarah comes round alone and moves out the trench followed by an animal shape. At Command HQ, Greiner resumes his interrogation of Dr Who and Harry who puzzle him. Nyder enters requesting items from store, Greiner protests but Nyder mentions an order from Davros - a name that produces an instant reaction from Ravon and Greiner who become conciliatory. Nyder also questions Dr Who and Harry. Outside in the wastelands Sarah is searching for the Dr, sees a huge figure following her and runs in terror towards a faint light. She arrives at a ruin and peers through a hole to see Davros in a wheelchair attended by Gharman. They are obviously carrying out an experiment with a target, then out of the gloom glides a machine - a primitive Dalek which destroys the target to order, much to the satisfaction of Davros.

Episode 2:

Sarah is still outside the ruin watching Davros when a hand grabs her and she faints - it is a Muto - Sevrin. Inside a bunker at a security check point Ravon arrives with Dr Who and Harry as prisoners and they are admitted. The travel bracelet is taken from the Dr. Outside the ruin Sarah is still unconscious with two mutos taking care of her. They are challenged by a Thal soldier and captured. Dr Who and Harry are taken to the Main Lab in the Bunker where Ronson talks to them. Davros arrives and it is clear that he is the supreme commander and is almost a machine himself. He has come to demonstrate the latest model of a Dalek. Even the primitive Dalek recognises danger from Dr Who and levels its weapon at him. Ronson intervenes to Davros' annoyance.

Inside the Thal Dome, Sevrin, Sarah and Marrass are in a cell with other prisoners - Sevrin explains that they are slaves and will be used to build a great rocket weapon with a nuclear warhead to destroy the Kaleds. They are taken to the Rocket Silo where prisoners are working. In the Detention Room Dr Who and Harry are recovering from a rough interrogation and discuss the 1000 year war between the Thals and Kaleds. The Dr is worried because his travel bracelet has been confiscated along with his other belongings. Ronson arrives and explains about the Daleks which are just being evolved as travel machines for severely mutated Kaleds, for mutations are becoming worse as time goes on. Ronson takes them into a corridor and shows them through a panel a room full of mutated Kaleds - mutations which will be the ultimate fate of them all. Sarah and the prisoners return to their cell exhausted but Sarah urges escape. In the Detention Room Dr Who, Harry and Ronson continue their conversation about Daleks and Dr Who succeeds in convincing Ronson about their ultimate danger and he agrees to help them escape into the Kaled City and warn the people as Davros is operating largely in secret with an elite corps helping him. In the Thal City Sarah and the prisoners manage to escape into the rocket rocket silo and climb scaffolding to the nose cone. Alarm bells sound and armed pursuit begins. Some prisoners are shot and Sarah and Sevrin are marooned on the scaffolding of the rocket. Dr Who and Harry are escaping through an air duct when they meet a huge monster.

Episode 3:

In the air duct Dr Who and Harry overcome the monster and continue their journey. On the rocket scaffold Sarah and Sevrin are being shot at by the Thals; they manage to reach the nose cone but are eventually recaptured. Dr Who and Harry get through to the cave which has some menacing 'things' in it. In the Main Lab Davros is continuing his successful experiments with the Daleks when news is brought to him that Dr Who and Harry have escaped. The Dr and Harry manage to reach Command HQ of the Kaleds and meet Gen. Greiner and some Kaled statesmen. The Dr repeats his warnings about the Daleks. Meanwhile in the rocket silo Sarah and Sevrin are working but Sarah is becoming ill from radiation. In the Main Lab Nyder arrives to report Dr Who's meeting with the statesmen. Davros is angry and suspects Ronson of having engineered the escape. At Command HQ Dr Who and Harry fail to convince the statesmen that Davros' experiments should be stopped but extract a promise of an investigation. Gen. Greiner tells them that Sarah is a prisoner of the Thals and they set out to rescue her. In the Main Lab Davros is confronted by Mogran (senior statesman) but manages to allay his fears by agreeing to an investigation into the Dalek experiments. In the Thal Dome Dr Who and Harry appear through a manhole in the corridor and reach the Rocket launch room where in addition to Thal officers are Davros and Nyder. They peer in through a window in the door and overhear Davros plotting with the Thals the destruction of the Kaled City. Whilst Dr Who and Harry are still listening in the corridor they hear a sound and hide. In the rocket launch room Nyder gives the Thal leader details on how to destroy the Kaled City dome - the Thal leader is puzzled but does not realise that Davros is working for his own power. They emerge into the corridor where Dr Who and Harry are still hiding. Further along the corridor a Thal solcier guards the rocket silo entrance but is overcome by Dr Who. In the rocket silo Sarah and Sevrin are resting under guard but know that they will die when the rocket is launched. Dr Who and Harry enter disguised as Thal soldiers and free the prisoners who run off. Sarah and Sevrin go off with Harry leaving Dr Who alone in the rocket silo. Sarah, Harry and Sevrin run down the corridor and manage to reach the manhole just before the pursuit catches up with them. In the rocket silo Dr Who is trying to sabotage the rocket but is laid out from behind. He comes to in the rocket launch room to hear the count-down for the rocket aimed on the Kaled City. In the Main Lab Kaled scientists are worried. In the rocket launch room the General pushes the fire button and Dr Who realises that Sarah and Harry must be back in the city by now. He is in despair. In the Main Lab Davros watches the destruction of the Kaled City dome and then orders a Dalek to exterminate Ronson whom he says has betrayed them. Ronson dies.

Episode 4:

In the Main Lab Davros is telling a group of Daleks of their destiny of universal supremacy. In the Rocket launch room the Thals are dizzy with victory. The Dr believes Sarah and Harry have perished in the destruction of the Kaled city and is fearful about the power of Davros and the Daleks. The Dr is told he is free to go. In the Main Lab Davros is instructing Gharman on the genetic development of Daleks and in the Thal city the Dr is with some excited Thal citizens when a group of Daleks appears and opens fire on the people; the Dr hides with Bettan. They escape the Daleks who overrun the Thal Dome wreaking destruction. In the Main Lab Davros is triumphant. Dr Who and Bettan manage to escape to the wastelands where they can see the flames of the Thal city behind them.

Bettan promises to organise some resistance among the surviving Thals and the Dr leaves him but is taken prisoner by some Mutos who prepare to kill him. Harry and Sarah appear and a joyful reunion takes place. They make plans to deal with the Dalek menace. In the Main Lab Gharman and Kavell are expressing doubts about Davros and plan rebellion. Outside a cave in the wastelands the Dr, Harry and Sarah plan with Sevrin to launch an attack on the bunker to create a diversion whilst they try and get into the lab. Inside the cave they come into contact with a huge creature which stings the Dr. In the Main Lab Nyder tricks Gharman into revealing the plans for the rebellion. Meanwhile in the cave the Dr, Harry and Sarah manage to scramble into the air duct to lead them back into the bunker. In the Detention Room Gharman meets Nyder secretly and unwittingly betrays himself. Davros appears and Gharman is overcome; they hear sounds from the air duct. In the corridor the Dr, Harry and Sarah emerge from the ventilator shaft to find Davros and Nyder waiting for them. In the Main Lab Davros has the Dr firmly strapped down and is trying to extract information from him about the future of the Daleks. The Dr refuses and Davros threatens Sarah and Harry. In a crater in the wastelands Bettan and some Thal soldiers plan an attack on the bunker. In the Main Lab Davros intensifies his questioning of Dr Who with Sarah and Harry enduring torture as he refuses to answer - eventually the Dr cannot bear to see their pain and agrees to tell Davros the future history of the Daleks (which he alone knows) thus enabling him to avoid their future defeat.

Episode 5:

In the Main Lab the Dr relates his knowledge of the Daleks which is recorded on a tape machine. Davros then orders the prisoners be taken to their cell. The Dr is full of remorse because he has revealed so much. Harry and Sarah are taken into the corridor and shoved into the Detention cell where they find Gharman, also a prisoner - they immediately start planning their escape. Outside in the corridor Kavell appears and talks to the Guard. In the Main Lab the Dr is vainly trying to persuade Davros to contain the Dalek power - he threatens to switch off Davros' life support system unless Davros destroys the Dalek incubator, Davros agrees and begins to give the order when Nyder enters and fells the Dr. Davros then intensifies the preparations for creating a race of Daleks. Nyder drags the Dr out of the room. Inside the ruins of the Thal dome two Daleks receive a recall sign. In a crater outside a small group of Thal soldiers set out to attack the bunker. In the corridor Nyder opens the door of the detention cell for Dr Who and finds Harry disguised as a guard. Nyder escapes while inside the detention cell the others plan to destroy the tape recording of the Dr's revelations and recover the travel bracelet to enable them to leave Skaro. In the corridor Gharman manages to overcome some elite guards and get them on his side. They begin to arm themselves. In the Main Lab Nyder tells Davros that the rebellion is spreading among the elite and Davros orders him to surrender. In the corridor the Dr, Harry and Sarah find some explosive and prepare to go down to the incubator room and destroy the Daleks. In the Main lab Gharman and Kavell arrive with Nyder to meet Davros - they are puzzled about the lack of resistance. The Dr, Harry and Sarah arrive outside the incubator room and begin to set up the explosive charge. In the Main Lab Davros agrees to the rebels' suggestion of a meeting of the elite - he seems confident. Outside in the crater Sevrin and the Thals hide and watch a procession of Daleks returning to the bunker. In the corridor Sarah and Harry wait for the Dr who is in the incubator room setting the charge. They call him but receive no answer, Harry rushes in to find the Dr covered in a liquid, he pulls him out into the corridor but he appears unharmed. Worried about the morality of destroying the Dalek race the Dr is full of indecision.

Episode 6:

In the corridor the Dr is in an agony of indecision about destroying the Daleks when Gharman appears and tells him that Davros has agreed to their terms and to a meeting. Sarah and Harry are pleased but the Dr has his doubts. In the Main Lab the elite corps and scientists are assembled awaiting Davros who begins his explanations. Dr Who edges over to the work area hoping to recover the travel bracelet and destroy the tape. Sarah finds the bracelet whilst Davros asks the assembled company to vote on whether the Daleks should be destroyed or developed further. At the entrance to the bunker a patrol of Daleks enters, Sevrin and the Thal detachment follow cautiously. In the Main Lab the debate continues, Nyder whispers to Davros who presses a switch. At the entrance to the bunker more Daleks are passing through the doors which close behind them. Sevrin and the Thals place a charge and blast the doors open. In the Main Lab Davros asks for a vote but only a few of the assembly move towards him in support. Dr Who notices Nyder sidling towards an exit and with Sarah and Harry he follows him. In the corridor Nyder realises he is being pursued. He runs but Harry brings him down. On being questioned

Nyder says he is getting out while he can. Dr Who asks him the whereabouts of the tape of his confession to Davros. Nyder tries to evade the issue but Harry gets rough and Nyder gives him. Meanwhile in another corridor Sevrin arrives at the Detention cell, finds it empty and hides from some Daleks. Dr Who, Sarah and Harry are in Davros' office trying to open the safe - they destroy the tape but Nyder gets out, locking them in. Then the Dr realises that the bracelet is missing again. At the bunker entrance the Thal soldiers are becoming anxious. In Davros' office Harry and the Dr cannot force door. Sarah draws their attention to the window into the Main Lab where Davros is still trying to persuade more people to join him without success. They see the doors of the Lab open - at each is a group of Daleks. Davros gives an order and the Daleks exterminate the crowd. In Davros' office the Dr, Harry and Sarah are horrified. In the Main Lab all opposition has been crushed and Nyder reappears. In Davros' Office the door is opening - it is Sevrin. The four run into the corridor. They find the travel bracelet encounter a Dalek but manage to escape through the corridors. Dr Who sends Sarah and Harry off with Sevrin to escape from the bunker and they reluctantly leave him, Sarah taking the travel bracelet with her. In the Main Lab Davros learns of their escape and orders that they be found and killed. The Daleks move off. At the entrance to the bunker the Thal soldiers are about to block the tunnel when Sarah, Harry and Sevrin appear. Outside the incubator room Dr Who is preparing to blow it up again. He just manages to escape as a Dalek appears and by touching the wires sets off the charge. The incubator room is destroyed. At the bunker entrance the Thals have set up a screen to show what is happening in the Main Lab where Davros is ordering the Daleks to make him secure. In the corridor Dr Who is running for his life to the entrance. In the Main Lab the Daleks begin to take over and Davros realises he cannot control them. Nyder is exterminated as he tries to help Davros. At the bunker entrance Dr Who appears just in time, hotly pursued by Daleks. The charge goes off, the tunnel is blocked and the pursuing Daleks destroyed. In the Main Lab, watched on the screen outside by Dr Who, Harry and Sarah, Davros tries to destroy the Daleks but is destroyed by them. They are incarcerated but will carry on developing until they break out and take over the planet. The Dr, Sarah and Harry prepare to leave and the Dr is hopeful for the future as he knows that however much destruction the Daleks are to wreak in the future eventually they will be defeated.

I enclose scripts which are first drafts but will give you an idea of the visual effects requirements. I am very keen for John Friedlander to model the heads of the Mutos and the Davros character if this is at all possible.

Dear Pauline,

Can you please put on all contracts for the men, "it may be necessary to have your hair cut short" or words to that effect!Also, those parts asterisked may have to have make up to make their faces horrible and mutated!

Many thanks,

 (Hazel Marriott)

P.S. We've obviously had to do our arithmetic very carefully for this as we've so little money and so many parts - so if any agent asks for an increase on their fee, can you please ring David, Thanks.

Thursday 2nd January 1975.

Dear Mr. Culley,

This is to confirm our requirements for DR. WHO 'Genesis of the Daleks' recording in January and February:

1) We would like two Fully Practical Daleks delivered to Room 302 at the B.B.C. Rehearsal Rooms in Victoria Road, North Acton by 10am on Thursday January 16th. These will not need to be transported to Television Centre for the first Recording.

2) RECORDING ONE: (Monday 27th January and Tuesday 28th January)

We need One Fully Practical Dalek in Studio 1 which I gather Peter Day, our Visual Effects designer will collect direct from you and will arrange its transportation to the Studio. This Dalek will be required at Outside Rehearsal in Room 302 from 10am on Thursday 30th January.

3) RECORDING TWO: (Monday 10th February and Tuesday 11th Feb.)

We need the 3 Fully Practical Daleks to be collected from Room 302 and delivered to Studio 8 by 10am on 10th February. We also need 5 Non Practical Daleks for this recording. At the end of the recording on 11th the 3 Fully Practical Daleks need to be collected from the Studio and delivered back to Room 302 by 10am on Thursday 13th February.

4) RECORDING THREE: (Monday 24th and Tuesday 25th February)

We again need the 3 Fully Practical Daleks collected from Room 302 at Acton and transported to Studio 6 at the Centre by 10am on the 24th. We also need the 5 Non Practical Daleks again for this Recording.

We also require Bits and pieces of Blown up Daleks to scatter about.

I would also like to confirm that we want all the Daleks painted a darker grey, which I believe George Gallacio has already spoken to you about. If you have any queries about this please contact me on the above extension. If there are any changes to this I shall of course let you know.

Thank you,

Yours sincerely

AN AUDIENCE RESEARCH REPORT

DR. WHO

Genesis of the Daleks

by Terry Nation

Producer: Philip Hinchcliffe

Part 6

Saturday, 12th April 1975, 5.30-5.55 pm, BBC-1

1. Size of audience (based on results of the Survey of Listening and Viewing).

It is estimated that the audience for this broadcast was 18.1% of the United Kingdom population. Programmes on BBC-2 and ITV at the time were seen by 0.3% and 18.3% (average).

2. Reaction of audience (based on 228 questionnaires completed by 15% of the Viewing Panel).

The reactions of this sample of the audience were distributed as follows:

A+	A	B	C	C-
11	30	35	21	3

which gives a REACTION INDEX of 56. The second, fourth and fifth episodes of this particular story gained figures of 57 or 58, while the average for Dr. Who in general stands at 58.

3. One group thought the episode slow and the conclusion tame and unimaginative. However, although it had, of course, been obvious from the outset that Dr. Who could not permit the Daleks to perish (for one thing, he could not change what had already happened and, for another, as one somewhat cynically put it 'you would lose your best money-spinner') this was generally regarded as a satisfactory ending to a story that might be dismissed by some as 'absolute rubbish' and 'just for kids', but which had clearly been followed fairly consistently by most reporting viewers, whether or not they had children watching with them.
4. Comment on the acting again centred around Tom Baker, the still comparatively new Dr. Who and, from what was said, viewers appeared to be fairly evenly divided between those who considered him stupid rather than eccentric (his 'sloppy scarf' was a particular irritant, it seemed) and those who liked his 'slightly dotty' interpretation of the part. The other roles were competently taken, viewers felt, and costumes, settings and make-up (particularly that of Davros) were commended, as were the 'special effects'.
5. 85% of the sample watched the whole programme, 8% came in in the middle, 4% tried a bit and 3% switched off before the end.
6. Asked how many of the six episodes in this particular story they had seen, 17% said one or two, 18% three or four and 65% five or six. Despite some who confessed to being 'fed up with them' - 'how many ways are there of skinning a rabbit?' - and would welcome the introduction of new, preferably non-mechanical, monsters, Daleks were clearly among the Doctor's most popular adversaries and viewers quite liked the idea of seeing how they came into being. A little more complex than some Dr. Who adventures, perhaps, and with underlying questions of conscience, the serial had been 'different' it was occasionally felt and although dismissed in some quarters as far-fetched, long drawn-out, confused and/or predictable, had provided acceptable escapist entertainment for the majority.

7. About half the sample had children watching with them and here there would appear to be no two ways about it - with few exceptions, the youngsters were enthralled. As was said 'the world stops for Doctor Who' and although being scared at times - some would not watch without an adult near at hand - they enjoyed every minute of it, evidently ('eyes like organ stops'; 'they find it compelling. The minor frights only add to the enjoyment'; they hate the monsters but still wouldn't miss it. Typical children!') and were sorry only that this particular story had come to an end. A handful, though, found it too frightening, would have liked more action or did not care much for the new Doctor.
